Expecting Big Battle At Corinth

Nation Was Anxiously Awaiting News Fifty Years Ago—Control of the Southwest at Stake—Recruiting in Windham County—$21,000 Fire on Water Street in This City—Gallant Charge of Eighth Connecticut at Newbern.

This week fifty years ago the country was on the tiptoe of expectancy for news from the battle between the Union and rebel forces, which was believed to be sure to take place at Corinth, Miss. On the outcome of the contest would depend the control of the Mississippi valley and it was known that the struggle would be fiercely fought. Information was meagrely sent, the exact number of the forces upon each side, but it was believed that the rebels under General Beauregard had 60,000 men at the least while the Union forces opposing them were supposed to equal the rebel number. The Union forces were said to be under command of General Buell, assisted by nine or ten other generals, of whom the most notable were Grant, Sherman and Thomas.

Recruiting in Windham County.

Recruiting for the field was being pushed actively in this section and under the advertisement, Windham County, Arouse—300 Men Wanted, the men of the county were urged to enlist to recruit the ranks of the Fifth Connecticut Artillery, under Colonel Robert O. Tyler. It was stated that this was the only volunteer artillery organization in the service. It was expected to raise two companies in the county.

An April Fool Joke.

The April Fooler on the Bulletin staff had his fun on the morning of the first by inserting a brief item to the effect that during a fire on Water street early that morning one of the banks of Norwich had been entered and a considerable amount abstracted. Full particulars were being withheld for the present, as for obvious reasons the matter was being kept secret.

The next morning the paper announced that it was now at liberty to state the full details in regard to the bank robbery, and would state that the bank mentioned was that of the Central bank and the implements used were a pickaxe and shovel. Several cartoons were carried away.

Big Fire on Water Street.

On the morning of the first of April there was a fire, which started in the building at 50 Water street, belonging to the estate of John A. Rockwell, was probably of incendiary origin. Estimated losses in this and other buildings on Commerce and Main streets, to which the fire spread, were as follows: Lucius Parsons, eating saloon, $500; B. F. Tracy, grocery, $100; O. J. Lamb, 50 Water street, on building and stock, $2,500; John W. Palmer, on building, $3,000; John W. Steadman, Aurora printing office, $150. Total losses in the fire amounted to $21,000; insured for $12,250.

The band of the Fourteenth regiment reported at Fort Trumbull on Sunday morning. The regiment is now at Fort Monroe, but its headquarters will hereafter be at Fort Trumbull, where 300 recruits are expected to arrive soon.

Lieut. J. H. Tingley has enlisted 43 men for the First Artillery.

Lieut. Frank L. Bond and E. L. Tyler have been appointed aides de camp to Brigadier General Tyler.
